

Cross-Pollinate Consulting: Press Freedom and Media Development Internship

Interested in the intersection between press freedom and development? Want to know more about how internet freedom and digital rights matter to democracy and international development? Passionate about research and writing? If so, please come and work with me at Cross-Pollinate Consulting. In this paid internship, you will help me develop a series of blog posts, work with me in running a global webinar series, and track and follow policy and funding developments related to media development and internet freedom related matters. I am looking for someone who has a background in journalism, communication studies, or political science. A strong interest in journalism, media law and policy, and following trends in freedom of the press is required. I am interested in working with someone who understands social media, how technology intersects with journalism -- for good and bad -- and is interested in working with me in a research assistant capacity.

If interested, please send me your CV, a writing sample, and include in your cover letter why you think media/journalism matters to international development. Internship can be on a semester basis or for the whole year. Please send application by September 30 to susanabbott1@gmail.com.

Commitment:

10-20 hours per week for 6 months or longer

Flexibility of exact start and end date and weekly schedule

Location:

Posner Center for International Development

1031 33rd Street, Suite 174, Denver, CO 80205