

Are you right for Envoys?

You enjoy working with students and exploring the world.

Yes, that's everybody....let's narrow it down a bit.

You are excited about the education-for-global-competency movement.

You have seen the rise of global education and believe that this trend is part of making the world a better place.

You want to see the trend move beyond a series of lists and frameworks to the actual work of building real, measurable, skills.

You know that the potential for educational experiences outside of the classroom is immense, and that such experiences require detailed planning and preparation. You believe that intentionality, curriculum, and assessment are required for educational travel to be worth the investment that schools and families are making.

You have proven expertise and academic training in education, international development, business, environmental sciences, and/or media production. You are comfortable planning and delivering regular and experiential lessons on these topics.

You are detail-oriented (e.g. you have read this far)

You have professional/academic references who will attest to your greatness.

You are comfortable in foreign environments and can model behaviors of empathy and cultural sensitivity.

You rock with technology.

You are flexible, hard-working, and willing to go 'all-in' to accomplish something great.

2017-18 Internships

Key Learning Outcomes

The selected interns will

1. Extend knowledge of global citizenship education
2. Get better at instructional design and understanding student/school needs
3. Develop expertise in curriculum design for online and experiential learning contexts
4. Develop expertise in multi-faceted evaluation and assessment design
5. Gain exposure to and practical experience in the operations of an innovative educational venture

Internship Options

Envoys Interns undertake specific projects designed to meet organizational needs and build on individual talents and experiences. Along with the activities listed below, Envoys is open to creative proposals from talented individuals.

Projects include:

Curriculum Development

- Development of teaching materials, teaching guides, resource lists, student activities, and assessments for online and face-to-face lessons.
- Topics include the modern history of a range of countries, cultural competency, the global tourism industry, and intercultural communications.

Program Development

- Work hand-in-hand with Envoys operations team to prepare programming in select destinations, including logistical set-up, connections to in-country organizations, and development of in-country curriculum. Every year, select interns join Envoys as field staff on domestic and international programs.

Business Development

- Assist management team in engagements with prospective school partners
- Assist design team with creation of materials, including videos, website extensions, and photo collages.
- Travel to conferences, schools, and summer fairs on behalf of Envoys

Application Procedure

The journey begins at envoys.com/intern